Do you know Chirripó National Park?

This is one of Costa Rica's wildest national parks, but relatively accessible on foot. The number one attraction in Chirripó National Park is climbing "Cerro Chirripó Grande", the highest peak in Costa Rica. The views are spectacular; on a clear day, you can see the Pacific Ocean and the Caribbean Sea simultaneously, so do not forget your camera.

It is long (15 km) and steep (nearly 3,000 meters) in elevation gain, but there are mountain huts (shelters) where you can spend the night, so you do not have to carry a tent. To protect the fragile ecosystems, camping is not allowed, except at the designated campground on the Herradura trail.

You can stay overnight in the shelters inside the park (reservations required). The first shelter is at Llano Bonito, not quite halfway up. The second, and main shelter about two kilometers from the peak, is the "Centro Ambientalista El Paraíso". The third shelter is in the "Valle de las Morenas," a few kilometers north of Chirripó. All require reservations. Outside the park, many lodging options exist in and around "San Gerardo de Rivas".

Cocos Island: A World Natural Wonder

Cocos Island, located 550 km off the Pacific coast of Costa Rica, is the only island in the tropical eastern Pacific with a tropical rainforest. Its position as the first point of contact with the northern equatorial current, the interactions between the island and the surrounding marine ecosystem, and its rainy weather make the area an ideal laboratory for studying biological processes. The island's underwater world has become famous due to the attraction it holds for divers, who rate it as one of the best places in the world to view large species such as sharks, rays, tuna, and dolphins.

The island is accessible exclusively by boat, and then you get to a station. Unfortunately, there are no trails to go hiking or walking around, so you must stay in the station. Travelers may wish to discover the mysteries of the sea with a scuba diving excursion. These adventurous tourists can explore inspiring underwater caves. San Isidro Labrador's Day

Around Costa Rica, many people celebrate May 15th in honor of San Isidro Labrador. With a high population of Catholics, Costa Rican towns join in paying respect to the Patron Saint of farmers.
